

1. Sanjay became the manager of a software company in Bengaluru. Although he was technically skilled, his employees rarely followed his instructions seriously. During meetings, he spoke in a dull tone, avoided interactions, and showed no enthusiasm for the projects. Employees felt disconnected and unmotivated. His senior advised him that communication is not just giving instructions but influencing people positively. 1 Point

Which of the following would most likely improve Sanjay's effectiveness as a communicator?

- ☐ Showing genuine interest and enthusiasm during meetings
- ☐ Developing empathy and respecting employees' time
- ☐ Speaking continuously without allowing feedback from employees
- ☐ Communicating ideas with confidence and conviction
- ☐ Delivering instructions in a brief and focused manner
- ☐ Ignoring nonverbal communication because only words matter

2. Kabir, a final-year engineering student at a reputed Institute, was selected to present his team's startup idea before industry experts. Although the project was innovative, the judges appeared confused during the presentation. Kabir used overly long and complex technical sentences, avoided eye contact, read directly from slides, and ignored the audience's reactions. At the end, the judges said the idea lacked clarity despite having strong content. According to Lecture 31, which of the following actions would help Kabir become a more effective communicator?

1 Point

- ☐ He should continue reading directly from the slides to ensure that he does not miss any information.
- ☐ He should focus only on verbal communication because body language is not important.
- ☐ He should present the idea with confidence and conviction.
- ☐ He should deliberately use difficult vocabulary to impress the judges.
- ☐ He should effectively integrate verbal and nonverbal communication.
- ☐ He should observe audience feedback and adjust his delivery accordingly.

3. Ankit recently became a senior student at an engineering college in Kanpur. During his first year, he strongly opposed ragging because he felt scared and humiliated by seniors. However, after becoming a senior himself, he began claiming that ragging helps juniors become confident and socially active. His younger sister, Anjali, who was preparing to join college, disagreed and argued that ragging can cause emotional trauma. Ankit refused to consider her view and insisted that all juniors should undergo the same experience. His father observed that Ankit's perspective had changed because of his new position and social role.

1 Point

Which concepts discussed in Lecture 32 are illustrated by this situation?

- ☐ Empathy helps people understand others' experiences and perspectives.
- ☐ Stereotyping based on religion
- ☐ Differences in viewpoints can lead to misunderstanding
- ☐ Physical barriers in communication
- ☐ A person's position in life can influence perception.
- ☐ Rigidity of thought can act as a communication barrier.

4. Pranav joined a multinational company in Bengaluru as a project coordinator. During his first week, he noticed that his manager, Nandini, often gave short instructions such as “Handle the client issue immediately” or “Prepare the urgent file quickly.” Pranav came from a small-town college background where communication was usually very detailed and direct. Because of this, he interpreted Nandini’s instructions differently from what she intended. One day, Nandini became upset because Pranav sent confidential information to the wrong client. Pranav argued that the instructions were unclear, while Nandini believed he should have understood the office culture and communication style. The HR department later explained that communication barriers can arise due to differences in background, perceptions, and false beliefs about reference. Which of the following communication barriers are evident in this situation?

1 Point

- ☐ Lack of a common frame of reference
- ☐ Differences in socio-cultural background
- ☐ Physical distance between communicators
- ☐ Misinterpretation during the decoding process
- ☐ Physical noise barrier caused by machines.
- ☐ Differences in workplace communication expectations

5. Yash worked in a private bank in Ahmedabad. One day, his team leader, Upasana, harshly criticized him in front of other employees for submitting a report late. Yash became angry and defensive during the meeting and stopped listening to further instructions. Even when Upasana later tried to explain the corrections calmly, he ignored her suggestions completely. The HR department later observed that emotional reactions from both sides had created communication barriers and harmed teamwork. Which concepts from Lecture 33 are demonstrated in this situation?

- ☐ Emotional interference can distort communication.
- ☐ Negative emotions can create barriers in interpersonal transactions.
- ☐ Translation problems cause language barriers.
- ☐ Positive emotions strengthened the communication process.
- ☐ Defensive attitudes may lead to misunderstandings.
- ☐ Active listening was absent from this interaction.

1 Point

6. Ishaan is a newly appointed project coordinator in a rapidly growing technology company. He notices that important instructions from senior management often become unclear by the time they reach frontline employees. Different departments interpret the same message differently, leading to delays, duplicate work, and confusion about project deadlines. To improve communication, Ishaan proposes several changes to the company's communication system. According to Lecture 34, which of the following strategies would help reduce miscommunication in this situation?

- ☐ Using multiple communication channels, such as emails, notice boards, and meetings, for important announcements
- ☐ Encouraging an open communication environment where employees can ask questions and provide feedback
- ☐ Depending primarily on informal conversations and workplace rumors to distribute important organizational information
- ☐ Flattening the organizational structure to reduce unnecessary communication levels
- ☐ Deliberately limiting information shared through formal communication channels to avoid overwhelming employees
- ☐ Providing employees with direct access to the appropriate decision-makers when necessary

7. Riya emailed her team: "Please revise the report before sending it to the client." She intended everyone to update the report using the latest sales figures before it was sent. However, some employees corrected only the grammar and spelling, others changed the formatting, while a few rewrote entire sections of the report. As a result, the reports became inconsistent, and the client meeting had to be postponed.

1 Point

According to Lecture 34, what best explains this situation?

- ☐ The communication was successful because everyone made some changes to the report.
- ☐ The misunderstanding occurred because email should never be used for workplace communication.
- ☐ The message resulted in miscommunication because the intended meaning was interpreted differently by the receivers.
- ☐ The problem arose because the employees intentionally ignored Riya's instructions.
- ☐ Miscommunication can occur even when people speak the same language because they interpret messages differently.
- ☐ Miscommunication can occur only when people speak different languages.

8. At a coaching institute in Delhi, Farhan observed the behavior of several students before an important scholarship interview. Kuldeep repeatedly chewed gum and walked back and forth outside the interview room as he waited for his turn. Anita maintained an upright posture, used relaxed, open hand movements, and maintained steady eye contact with the interview panel throughout the session. Meanwhile, Ayushi tightly folded her arms whenever the interviewers asked challenging questions. After the interviews, the trainer explained that involuntary body language often reflects a person's genuine thoughts and emotions. According to Lecture 35, which of the following statements are correct?

- ☐ Frequently chewing gum before an interview may indicate feelings of nervousness or anxiety.
- ☐ An open body posture generally reflects confidence and comfort during communication.
- ☐ Open hand gestures alone can accurately determine whether a person is being truthful.
- ☐ Restless body movements are reliable indicators of leadership ability.
- ☐ Folding the arms across the chest may suggest defensiveness or insecurity.
- ☐ Involuntary body language may reveal a person's genuine thoughts and emotions.

9. During an orientation program at a multinational company, Fatimah, Ankit, and Lokesh observed how senior officials interacted with employees. The Chief Executive Officer worked in the largest office, while junior employees were assigned small workstations. During meetings, the department head usually sat on a raised chair, whereas the interns sat on lower chairs. The trainer later explained that body language and the use of space often communicate status and authority without using words. According to Lecture 35, which of the following statements are correct?

1 Point

- ☐ A person's authority is determined only by the words they speak during a conversation.
- ☐ Sitting lower than another person is generally considered a sign of dominance.
- ☐ Nonverbal cues, such as seating position and the use of space, can communicate status.
- ☐ The amount of space a person occupies has no relationship with perceived authority.
- ☐ Occupying a larger personal or workspace may indicate greater power or authority.
- ☐ Sitting lower than another person generally reflects a lower position in terms of dominance.

10. During an international youth conference, Ruhi observed that participants from different countries communicated using both facial expressions and hand gestures. She noticed that basic facial expressions, such as smiling when greeting others, were generally understood by participants from different cultures. However, some hand gestures were interpreted differently by people from other countries, even though the speakers intended to communicate the same meaning. According to Lecture 36, which of the following statements are correct? Select all that apply.

1 Point

- ☐ Some nonverbal signs are universally recognized and commonly accepted.
- ☐ The meaning of certain gestures may vary across different cultures.
- ☐ Every hand gesture has the same meaning in all countries.
- ☐ Cultural background should be considered when interpreting nonverbal gestures.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication is completely independent of cultural influences.
- ☐ Facial expressions such as happiness are generally understood across cultures.

11. Diya, a postgraduate student at Delhi University, was required to deliver a seminar presentation on climate change before an audience of more than one hundred and twenty students and thirty faculty members. Although she was very confident when discussing the topic casually with her friends in the hostel canteen, she became nervous while preparing to present on stage. During her preparation, she realized that she needed to communicate her ideas clearly, confidently, and effectively to such a large audience. She also wanted to make sure that her presentation was concise, engaging, and supported by appropriate verbal and nonverbal communication. According to Lecture 31, which action would best help Diya become a more effective communicator during her presentation?

1 Point

- ☐ Avoiding presentation opportunities until confidence develops naturally
- ☐ Beginning the presentation by apologizing to the audience for feeling nervous
- ☐ Presenting the entire topic using lengthy and complex explanations
- ☐ Focusing only on memorizing the content without considering how it is communicated
- ☐ Ignoring the audience's reactions during the presentation
- ☐ Communicating her ideas with confidence, clarity, enthusiasm, and appropriate verbal and nonverbal communication.

12. During her first month as a customer service executive at a telecommunications company in Pune, Ankita received a phone call from a dissatisfied customer. 1 Point

The customer explained that his internet connection had stopped working after a recent software update. Without allowing him to finish explaining the problem, Ankita immediately assumed that the issue was caused by unpaid bills because she had handled several similar cases earlier that week. She interrupted the customer immediately, insisted that payment was the problem, and repeatedly advised him to clear his dues. Later, the technical support team discovered that the customer's account was fully paid and that the actual problem was a system error after the software update. Her supervisor explained that Ankita's assumptions prevented her from understanding the customer's actual concern. According to Lecture 32, what was the primary communication barrier in this situation?

- ☐ Physical barriers in communication
- ☐ Lack of confidence by the sender
- ☐ Emotional interference caused by anger
- ☐ Stereotyping and jumping to conclusions
- ☐ Inappropriate communication channel
- ☐ Excessive use of technology

13. Abhishek wanted to discuss a confidential salary issue with his manager. Instead of meeting him personally, he posted the question in the company's public WhatsApp group. According to the lecture, what communication mistake did Abhishek make?

1 Point

- ☐ He used too many formal words.
- ☐ He selected an inappropriate communication medium.
- ☐ He used face-to-face communication.
- ☐ He avoided technology.
- ☐ He encouraged feedback.
- ☐ He practiced active listening.

14. During her first week at a publishing company, Khushi was asked by her supervisor to “proof” the final draft of an article before it was sent for printing. Since she had never worked in the publishing industry, she assumed “proof” meant providing evidence that the article’s information was correct. Instead of checking the document for spelling, grammar, and formatting errors, she began searching for supporting references. As a result, the article was printed with several typographical mistakes. Her supervisor later explained that the misunderstanding occurred because Khushi interpreted the term differently. According to Lecture 33, what was the main cause of this communication failure?

1 Point

- ☐ Emotional interference prevented Khushi from understanding a clearly familiar instruction.
- ☐ A limited frame of reference caused Khushi to interpret an industry-specific term differently from her supervisor.
- ☐ Khushi intentionally ignored her supervisor’s instructions because she disagreed with the assigned task.
- ☐ Physical noise in the workplace prevented Khushi from hearing the supervisor’s instructions correctly.
- ☐ The supervisor’s use of nonverbal communication created confusion about the meaning of the task.
- ☐ Khushi lacked motivation to complete the task and deliberately searched for unrelated information.

15. Neha became a successful team leader in her company because she always encouraged employees to express their ideas freely during meetings. She ensured everyone could ask questions without fear, provided clear instructions for the tasks, and welcomed feedback from team members, regardless of their position, in the organization. Because of her supportive communication style, employees felt respected, motivated, and comfortable sharing their opinions freely. According to the lecture, which type of communication environment did Neha successfully create?

1 Point

- ☐ Closed communication climate
- ☐ Defensive communication structure
- ☐ Selective communication system
- ☐ Emotional communication barrier
- ☐ Open communication environment
- ☐ Informal gossip network

16. Harsha was responsible for explaining a new workplace safety procedure to her colleagues before they began using new equipment. She carefully presented all the instructions; however, several employees misunderstood the procedure and performed the task incorrectly because they interpreted her message differently than she intended. Although Harsha believed her explanation was clear, the intended message was not successfully received by the employees. According to Lecture 34, what best describes this communication situation?

1 Point

- ☐ Effective communication
- ☐ Message reinforcement
- ☐ Miscommunication
- ☐ Horizontal communication
- ☐ Informal communication
- ☐ Emotional motivation

17. At a university orientation session, Kartik noticed that Manisha stopped speaking after a disagreement with her teammates. Although she remained silent, she repeatedly slammed her notebook on the desk, avoided looking at others, and left the room without responding to anyone. The instructor later explained that communication does not end simply because people stop talking. According to Lecture 35, which statement best describes Manisha's behavior?

1 Point

- ☐ She completely stopped communicating.
- ☐ She demonstrated effective verbal communication.
- ☐ She showed confidence by avoiding interaction.
- ☐ She eliminated all forms of communication.
- ☐ She continued communicating through nonverbal behavior.
- ☐ She relied only on formal communication.

18. During a team meeting, the project leader proposed an unrealistic deadline for completing an important project. Instead of arguing, Priyanka remained silent, stopped responding to further discussion, and avoided eye contact whenever the project leader addressed her. Although she never expressed her disagreement verbally, the project leader recognized her opposition through her silence and nonverbal behavior. According to Lecture 36, which concept best explains Priyanka's behavior?

1 Point

- ☐ Verbal communication is always more effective than nonverbal communication.
- ☐ Silence indicates that a person has no opinion about the discussion.
- ☐ Communication stops whenever people stop speaking.
- ☐ Silence and body language can communicate powerful messages without words.
- ☐ Body language cannot express disagreement unless supported by spoken words.
- ☐ Silence should never be used during professional communication.

19. Roshni attended an important job interview wearing a brightly colored, heavily decorated jacket, numerous large accessories, and a strong perfume. Throughout the interview, the panel members seemed distracted by her appearance instead of focusing on her answers. According to Lecture 36, what best explains this situation?

1 Point

- ☐ Appropriate accessories always improve communication.
- ☐ Accessories can become communication barriers when used inappropriately.
- ☐ Expensive accessories guarantee a positive first impression.
- ☐ Wearing more accessories always reflects professionalism.
- ☐ Strong perfume always increases confidence.
- ☐ Formal communication is unrelated to personal appearance.

20. During a classroom seminar, Radhika verbally told everyone that she was fully confident and relaxed before her presentation. However, her trembling hands, nervous facial expressions, and lack of eye contact suggested something different. According to the lecture, this situation best demonstrates:

1 Point

- ☐ Verbal communication is stronger than body language.
- ☐ Nervous body language always improves confidence.
- ☐ Facial expressions are meaningless.
- ☐ Communication only happens through words.
- ☐ Body language can always be hidden perfectly.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication can contradict verbal communication.

21. During a college festival, Rohit sent confusing instructions to the volunteers, without proper punctuation, sentence structure, or organization. As a result, different volunteers interpreted the instructions differently, leading to confusion and scheduling problems. Rohit later argued that punctuation marks are not important in modern communication. According to the lecture, Rohit's belief is incorrect because effective communication requires the sender to communicate ideas clearly and concisely.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

22. Pallavi joined a media company in Noida, where employees came from different states and language backgrounds. During meetings, Pallavi assumed everyone understood Hindi expressions and local slang in the same way she did. Many team members misunderstood her instructions, leading to confusion in the project work. Pallavi argued that since everyone understood basic Hindi, there should be no communication barriers. According to the lecture, communication barriers can still arise even when people speak the same language, because they may not share the same frame of reference, interpretation, or perception.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

23. Meera received criticism from her supervisor but calmly listened, reflected on the suggestions carefully, and improved her work accordingly. As mentioned in the course lecture, ignoring criticism completely is the best strategy for developing communication skills.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

24. During a communication skills class, Tara believed that crossing her arms during a group discussion would make her appear more approachable and open to other people's opinions. According to Lecture 35, crossing the arms generally indicates openness and willingness to communicate.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

☐ False

24. During a communication skills class, Tara believed that crossing her arms during a group discussion would make her appear more approachable and open to other people's opinions. According to Lecture 35, crossing the arms generally indicates openness and willingness to communicate.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

25. During a communication workshop, Kavya noticed that Shivam verbally praised a classmate's presentation, but his facial expressions, crossed arms, and irritated posture suggested disagreement and frustration. According to Lecture 36, nonverbal communication can contradict verbal communication.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False
