

1. During a noisy classroom discussion, Professor Ashok stopped speaking when students continued talking loudly among themselves. Instead of shouting, he silently raised his hand and placed one finger over his lips. The students immediately became quiet and focused on him. Later, he explained that communication does not always require words because gestures can effectively replace verbal communication in certain situations. Based on Lecture 37, which of the following statements are correct?

1 Point

- ☐ Gestures can regulate classroom interaction.
- ☐ Words are always necessary for communication.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication can sometimes substitute for verbal communication.
- ☐ Silence can sometimes communicate authority or control.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication has no functional role.
- ☐ Body language can influence people's behavior without speech.

2. During a student leadership workshop in Jaipur, Mitali was asked to present a community service project to a group of volunteers. As she explained the project's goals, she smiled while describing the team's achievements and pointed toward the charts displayed on the presentation board while explaining the project's results. When she introduced the project's biggest accomplishment, she deliberately stressed a few important words to capture everyone's attention. At the end of her presentation, she paused, looked toward the audience, and nodded to invite questions before stepping away from the podium. According to Lecture 37, which statements correctly illustrate the functions performed by nonverbal communication?

1 Point

- ☐ Pointing toward the charts complements the spoken explanation.
- ☐ Speaking confidently proves that nonverbal communication is unnecessary.
- ☐ Every gesture has exactly the same meaning in all situations and cultures.
- ☐ Smiling while describing achievements reinforces the positive verbal message.
- ☐ Stressing important words accents key information for the audience.
- ☐ Pausing and looking toward the audience helps regulate interaction by inviting others to participate.

3. While waiting for a delayed train at Chennai Central Railway Station, Riya sat on a platform bench surrounded by unfamiliar passengers. She maintained a little distance from the strangers and avoided prolonged eye contact while waiting. A little later, her close friend Karan arrived, and Riya immediately shifted closer so they could sit together comfortably. After boarding the crowded train, most passengers stood quietly, minimized unnecessary physical contact, and respected one another's personal boundaries despite the limited space. A psychology student observing the situation related these behaviors to concepts discussed in Lecture 38.

1 Point

Which options correctly reflect the concepts from Lecture 38?

- ☐ Proxemics refers to the study of interpersonal space and distance.
- ☐ People often avoid eye contact with strangers in crowded places.
- ☐ Public space and intimate space mean exactly the same thing.
- ☐ Invading personal space never affects communication.
- ☐ Maintaining distance has no connection with relationships or comfort levels.
- ☐ Individuals usually reduce physical distance with close friends and family members.

4. While attending a national youth conference in Bhopal, Ishaan observed how different speakers communicated with the audience throughout the event. One speaker maintained natural eye contact while delivering the presentation. Another arrived well before the session began and started the program exactly on time. Before the discussion, a guest speaker greeted participants with a warm handshake. During the interactive session, the speaker also maintained a comfortable distance from audience members while answering their questions, helping everyone feel at ease.

According to Lecture 38, which statements correctly identify the forms of nonverbal communication illustrated in this situation?

- ☐ Maintaining natural eye contact is an example of oculesics.
- ☐ Starting the session on time is an example of kinesics.
- ☐ Starting the session on time is an example of chronemics.
- ☐ Greeting participants with a handshake is an example of haptics.
- ☐ A handshake is an example of oculesics.
- ☐ Maintaining a comfortable distance from the audience is an example of proxemics.

5. During a weekly research group meeting at a university, Professor Ramesh carefully observed how his students responded while he discussed their project progress. Aditya sat comfortably with his hands clasped behind his head and his legs crossed while listening to the feedback. Priya repeatedly tapped her fingers on the table and glanced at her wristwatch every few minutes. Meanwhile, Farhan entered the meeting room with a brisk walk, maintained an upright posture, and kept his hands firmly behind his back as he greeted everyone before taking his seat.

1 Point

Which statements are correct according to Lecture 39?

- ☐ Farhan's brisk and erect walk may indicate confidence.
- ☐ Priya's behavior definitely proves disrespect toward the professor.
- ☐ Aditya's posture automatically means he is arrogant.
- ☐ Farhan's posture indicates he is brilliant in his studies.
- ☐ Aditya's posture may indicate overconfidence or superiority.
- ☐ Priya's body language may indicate impatience or boredom.

6. During a customer service training session, Priya observed how experienced employees communicated with customers. She noticed that they were aware of their own body language, paid attention to customers' nonverbal cues, and adjusted their body language in different situations. According to Lecture 40, which characteristics best describe competent communicators in terms of nonverbal communication?

1 Point

- ☐ Displaying the same body language regardless of the situation
- ☐ Ignoring their own gestures while focusing only on spoken communication
- ☐ Believing that body language cannot be improved through awareness and practice
- ☐ Monitoring their own nonverbal messages
- ☐ Recognizing and interpreting the nonverbal messages of others
- ☐ Using different nonverbal behaviors appropriately in different situations

7. During a leadership training program in Bengaluru, Rhea worked with participants from different cultural backgrounds to complete a team activity. During the discussion, one participant smiled politely without speaking, another maintained very little eye contact with senior members, and a third used a hand gesture that some participants misunderstood. Before concluding the session, the trainer reminded everyone that nonverbal behaviors should be interpreted by considering cultural norms and the situation in which they occur, rather than assuming that the same behavior has the same meaning for everyone.

According to Lecture 40, which statements correctly reflect the trainer's guidance?

- ☐ Nonverbal communication should be interpreted within its cultural context.
- ☐ Nonverbal behavior should be interpreted together with the situation in which it occurs.
- ☐ Limited eye contact always indicates dishonesty.
- ☐ The same nonverbal behavior may communicate different meanings in different situations.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication is always clear and unambiguous.
- ☐ Understanding the overall context helps interpret nonverbal communication more accurately.

8. Ira attended an interview for a teaching position at a reputed school in Mumbai. Before entering the interview room, she turned off her mobile phone completely. She entered after knocking gently on the door and greeted every panel member with “Good morning.” After receiving permission, she sat upright near the front of the chair and maintained eye contact with the speakers. During the discussion, she interrupted one interviewer several times, eager to prove her knowledge. She also wore strong perfume because she believed it made her appear sophisticated.

Which actions best reflect effective interview body language and professionalism?

- ☐ Greeting every interviewer politely
- ☐ Interrupting interviewers to show confidence
- ☐ Sitting upright near the front of the chair
- ☐ Turning off her mobile phone before entering
- ☐ Knocking gently before entering
- ☐ Wearing strong perfume

9. During an international academic conference in Hyderabad, Aditi presented her research to participants from several different countries. After her presentation, one delegate gave her a thumbs-up gesture, and she immediately assumed it was a sign of appreciation. Later, another participant explained that the same gesture could have an offensive meaning in some cultures. During the conference, Aditi also noticed another delegate sitting quietly with a serious facial expression and mistakenly believed he was upset with her presentation. After a conversation with him, she discovered that he had simply been exhausted after a long overnight journey.

Which statements correctly reflect the lecture's explanation?

- ☐ Serious facial expressions always indicate anger.
- ☐ One body language cue alone should never be used for final judgment.
- ☐ All gestures have universal meanings across every culture.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication can be culturally different.
- ☐ Positive gestures in one culture may have negative meanings elsewhere.
- ☐ Nonverbal messages are often ambiguous.

10. During a university leadership assessment in Mysuru, Devansh participated in a group discussion on the topic "How Can Indian Cities Reduce Traffic Congestion?" Midway through the discussion, two participants strongly disagreed about the best solution and began defending their own ideas repeatedly. Instead of taking sides, Devansh listened carefully to both viewpoints, identified the strengths of each suggestion, and proposed combining the most practical ideas into one balanced solution. His approach reduced tension, encouraged further discussion, and helped the group work toward a common conclusion.
- 1 Point

According to Lecture 42, which behaviors best demonstrate effective group discussion skills?

- ☐ Listening carefully to opposing viewpoints before responding
- ☐ Identifying common ground between different opinions
- ☐ Suggesting a balanced solution by combining useful ideas
- ☐ Supporting only one participant without considering other viewpoints
- ☐ Helping reduce unnecessary conflict within the group
- ☐ Repeating one's own opinion until others accept it

11. During a leadership development workshop at a multinational company in Pune, participants were asked to deliver a short presentation introducing themselves to the audience. Vikram spoke confidently and repeatedly said that he was excited about leading future projects. However, throughout his presentation, he avoided eye contact, kept his arms tightly folded, maintained a tense facial expression, and frequently shifted his weight from one foot to the other. Although his speech was well organized and grammatically correct, many participants felt that he appeared nervous and unconvinced by his own message. According to Lecture 37, which statement best explains why the audience developed this impression?

1 Point

- ☐ The audience focused mainly on the grammatical accuracy of Vikram's speech instead of his overall communication.
- ☐ The audience misunderstood Vikram because effective communication depends entirely on the words used by the speaker.
- ☐ Vikram should have avoided speaking altogether and communicated only through gestures and facial expressions.
- ☐ Vikram's nonverbal communication contradicted his verbal message, causing the audience to rely more on his body language than on his spoken words.
- ☐ Since body language is completely determined by genetics, Vikram could not have improved his nonverbal communication.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication is important only in formal interviews and has little influence during presentations.

12. During a weekend visit to his aunt's home, Pulkit was invited to join the family for lunch. When his aunt, Meera, offered him another serving of her homemade biryani, he politely replied, "No, thank you. I'm already full." However, Pulkit continued looking at the food, smiled with interest, inhaled its aroma, and unconsciously moved his plate closer to the serving dish. Recognizing these nonverbal cues, Meera served him another portion, which he accepted with a smile and began eating immediately.

1 Point

Which function of nonverbal communication is most clearly shown here?

- ☐ Nonverbal communication repeats verbal meaning.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication contradicts the verbal meaning.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication eliminates emotions.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication replaces all social customs.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication reduces cultural understanding.
- ☐ Nonverbal communication stops communication completely.

13. Anchita recently joined a technology company in Hyderabad. During project meetings, her team leader, Rohit, often stood very close to employees while talking to them, making several team members visibly uncomfortable. One afternoon, while discussing an upcoming client presentation with Anchita, Rohit stepped even closer than usual. Anchita instinctively moved backward and held her laptop bag in front of him, creating some distance between them.

1 Point

According to Lecture 38, what does Anchita's behavior most likely suggest?

- ☐ She wanted to end the project discussion permanently.
- ☐ She was intentionally insulting her manager in public.
- ☐ She was practicing formal handshaking techniques.
- ☐ She was creating distance because her personal space felt invaded.
- ☐ She believed all managers should stand very far away from employees.
- ☐ She was attempting to improve vocal communication skills.

14. During a campus placement drive in Chennai, Rahul arrived ten minutes before his scheduled interview and waited patiently outside the interview room. Although several candidates became restless as the interview schedule was delayed, Rahul remained calm and entered only after he was invited. Later, the interviewer commented that Rahul's punctuality and patience reflected a professional attitude even before the interview had begun. 1 Point

According to Lecture 38, which type of nonverbal communication is best illustrated in this situation?

- ☐ Haptics, because punctuality is expressed through physical touch.
- ☐ Oculistics, because waiting patiently mainly involves eye contact.
- ☐ Kinesics, because punctuality is a form of body movement.
- ☐ Proxemics, because arriving early changes interpersonal distance.
- ☐ Paralanguage, because silence always replaces spoken communication.
- ☐ Chronemics, because the use of time communicates professionalism.

15. During an international communication skills workshop in South Korea, Tejas, an Indian participant, watched a video showing a junior employee touching the feet of an elderly senior colleague while greeting him. Some participants considered the gesture unusual, while Tejas recognized it as a respectful way of greeting an elderly person. The instructor asked the participants why the same gesture could receive different reactions from people from different cultural backgrounds. 1 Point

According to Lecture 39, which principle best explains the different interpretations of the gesture?

- ☐ Body-language expressions always have exactly the same meaning in every culture.
- ☐ A gesture can be interpreted accurately without considering its cultural context.
- ☐ Body-language expressions may have different meanings depending on the cultural context.
- ☐ Universal body-language expressions do not require any cultural consideration.
- ☐ All gestures have identical meanings in professional communication.
- ☐ Body language has no connection with cultural differences.

16. During a group discussion, Ananya noticed that her classmate, Riya, was sitting slightly forward and leaning toward the other participants while listening to their ideas. As the discussion became more engaging, Riya moved to the edge of her chair and continued leaning slightly toward the speaker. Her posture suggested that she was interested in the discussion and willing to participate.

1 Point

According to Lecture 39, which aspect of nonverbal communication is most clearly illustrated in this situation?

- ☐ Defensiveness, because leaning forward shows that a person is protecting herself from the conversation.
- ☐ Insecurity, because sitting on the edge of a chair indicates nervousness.
- ☐ Indifference, because sitting forward shows that a person is not interested in the interaction.
- ☐ Aggression, because leaning toward another person indicates hostility.
- ☐ Cooperation and active interest in the conversation, because leaning toward another person and sitting on the edge of a chair indicate involvement.
- ☐ Confidence, because every forward-leaning posture indicates self-confidence.

17. During a professional development workshop, Neha and her classmates participated in a session on interview skills. The trainer asked each participant to record a short mock interview and then observe their own facial expressions, gestures, posture, and eye contact. After watching the recordings, the trainer explained that recognizing one's own nonverbal habits is the first step toward improving body language and creating a positive impression during interviews. 1 Point

According to Lecture 40, what is the most effective way to control body language?

- ☐ Become consciously aware of one's body language behaviors.
- ☐ Completely stop using gestures during communication.
- ☐ Avoid eye contact in formal situations.
- ☐ Speak less so that body language becomes unimportant.
- ☐ Copy every gesture used by others.
- ☐ Maintain the same posture in every situation.

18. Rohan arrived twenty minutes early for an interview at a financial consulting firm in Mumbai. While waiting outside the interview room, he noticed several candidates talking loudly, pacing around nervously, and checking social media on their phones. Instead, Rohan quietly reviewed his resume, maintained a calm posture, kept his phone switched off, and waited patiently until his name was called. The receptionist later remarked that his behavior reflected professionalism even before the interview had begun.

1 Point

According to Lecture 41, what aspect of Rohan's behavior created the most positive first impression?

- ☐ Frequently checking social media to stay relaxed before the interview
- ☐ Walking continuously around the waiting area to release nervousness
- ☐ Joining other candidates in loud conversations to appear confident
- ☐ Remaining calm and behaving professionally while waiting for the interview
- ☐ Complaining about the interview delay to the receptionist
- ☐ Constantly adjusting his appearance in front of everyone

19. During a selection process for a management internship, Harsh participated in a group discussion on the topic “The Impact of Social Media on Young People.” 1 Point
- While several participants eagerly shared their opinions, Mehul remained silent despite appearing well prepared. Noticing this, Harsh politely invited Mehul to share his perspective before continuing the discussion. He listened carefully without interrupting, acknowledged Mehul’s contribution, and later summarized the group’s main ideas to help everyone reach a common conclusion. The moderator appreciated Harsh’s overall approach during the discussion.

According to Lecture 42, which behavior most clearly demonstrates effective group discussion skills?

- ☐ Speaking continuously so that the discussion never becomes silent
- ☐ Correcting every participant immediately after they finish speaking
- ☐ Ignoring quieter members because participation is their own responsibility
- ☐ Repeating the same argument several times to strengthen one’s opinion
- ☐ Changing the discussion topic whenever disagreement occurs
- ☐ Encouraging quieter participants to contribute to the discussion

20. During a management entrance assessment in Jaipur, Meenal participated in a group discussion on the topic “Should Social Media Be Regulated More Strictly?” As the discussion progressed, another participant presented reliable statistics that challenged Meenal’s original opinion. After listening carefully, she acknowledged the new evidence, modified part of her argument, and explained why she had changed her position. The moderator appreciated her willingness to think critically instead of defending her original opinion at all costs. According to Lecture 42, which behavior best demonstrates effective group discussion skills?

1 Point

- ☐ Dominating the discussion to ensure that others accept one’s viewpoint
- ☐ Rejecting evidence that contradicts one’s initial opinion
- ☐ Refusing to acknowledge strong arguments presented by other participants
- ☐ Interrupting others before they finish expressing their ideas
- ☐ Being willing to reconsider one’s opinion after hearing convincing evidence
- ☐ Changing one’s opinion simply to agree with the majority, even without evaluating the evidence

21. Priyanka participated in a communication workshop in Hyderabad where attendees from different countries were shown photographs of people displaying various facial expressions. Although the participants generally recognized the emotions shown in the photographs, the instructor reminded them that interpretations of nonverbal expressions can vary depending on cultural context. Based on the concepts discussed in Lecture 39, all facial expressions have exactly the same meaning across all cultures.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

22. Mohan attended a customer service workshop in Chennai where he observed a customer standing in line with crossed arms. He immediately assumed that the customer was angry and unwilling to cooperate without considering the surrounding situation or any other nonverbal cues. As explained in Lecture 40, a single nonverbal cue can be used by itself to accurately determine a person's emotions and intentions.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

22. Mohan attended a customer service workshop in Chennai where he observed a customer standing in line with crossed arms. He immediately assumed that the customer was angry and unwilling to cooperate without considering the surrounding situation or any other nonverbal cues. As explained in Lecture 40, a single nonverbal cue can be used by itself to accurately determine a person's emotions and intentions.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

23. Ankita was participating in a leadership training session in Ahmedabad when her teammates noticed that she suddenly became unusually quiet, stopped smiling, and started avoiding interaction with others, all after receiving an unexpected phone call. Instead of making immediate assumptions, the trainer advised everyone to consider the recent change in her behavior before drawing conclusions. According to Lecture 40, changes in a person's usual nonverbal behavior may provide more meaningful information than individual gestures.

1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

24. Niharika appeared for a campus placement interview in Lucknow and greeted the interview panel with a pleasant smile. She maintained appropriate eye contact, sat upright, and listened attentively to every question before responding. Based on the ideas presented in Lecture 41, positive body language during an interview helps create a favorable impression on the interviewers. 1 Point

☐ True

☐ False

25. Pooja participated in a group discussion for a management internship in Noida. She listened carefully to different viewpoints and respectfully disagreed with one participant by supporting her opinion with logical reasoning. Although she did not agree with every suggestion, she remained polite and encouraged the group to continue discussing the topic objectively. Based on the concepts discussed in Lecture 42, effective group discussion requires participants to defend their own opinions without appreciating or considering the viewpoints other participants. 1 Point

☐ True

☐ False